

LUKAS ULMI

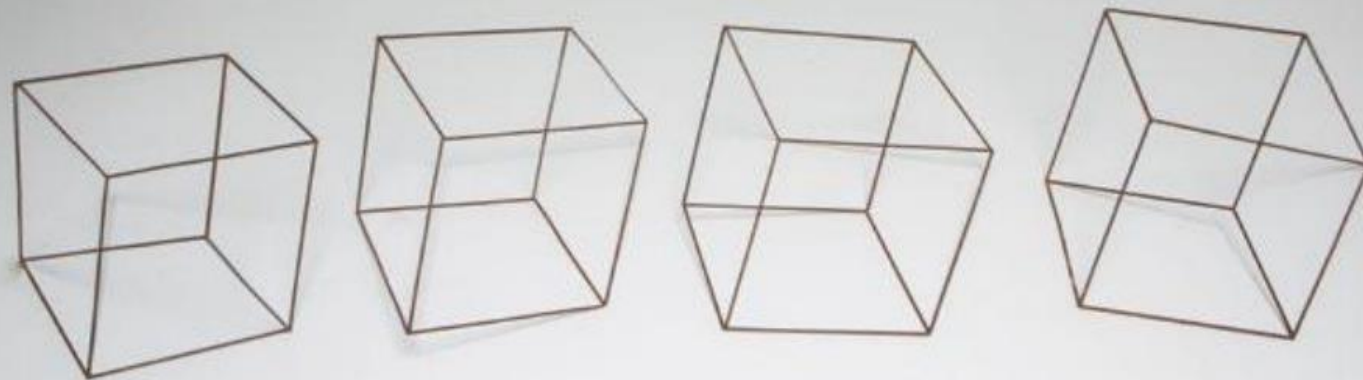

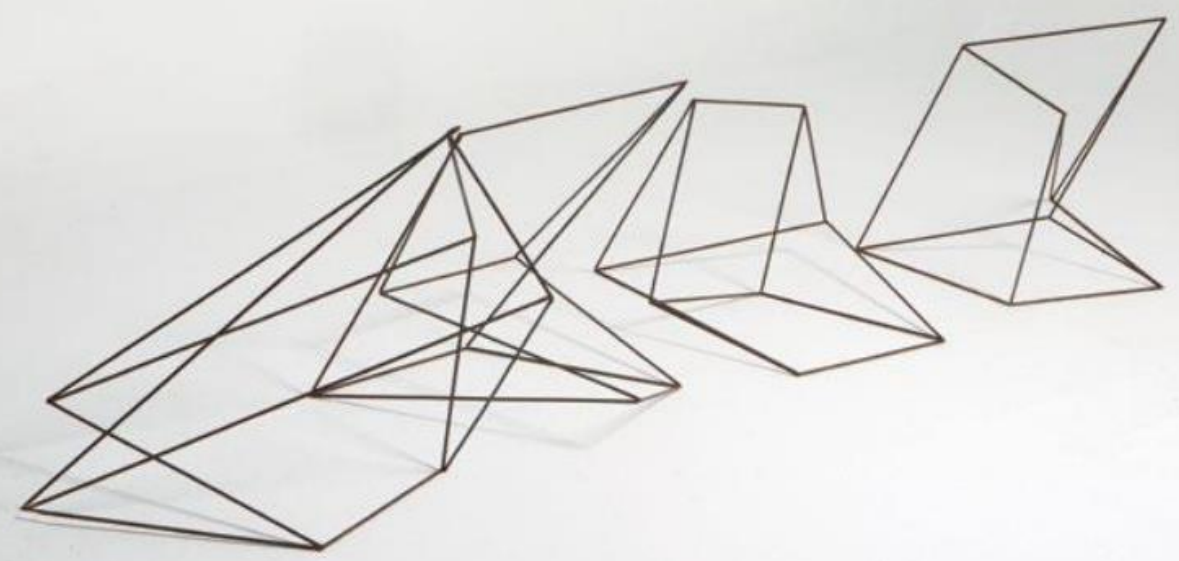

Ulmi's work unveils the hidden beauty of shapes, stones, seemingly static forms, incomplete or meaningless objects that are often found washed up on Valencia's beaches. These recycled items are turned into authentic sculptures where weightlessness, movement and poetry unite in delicate iron compositions that subvert ideas of harmony, balance and space. His works have strong connections to the earth, creating circles and lines representing a symbolic return to primary contact, such as planets in constant motion or the harmonious flow of energy in nature. Since 1998, Ulmi's monumental sculptures and fountains have been displayed in numerous squares in Spain and Switzerland. His work has been shown across the world and acquired by important public institutions such as the Palau de la Música in Valencia.

❖ It is important to highlight the discovery and rereading of “foundobjects”, preferably of a natural nature, that he collected, analyzed and related them to each other. Ulmi was to inexorably turn all those objects, too, into starting points for othersubsequent creative experiences.

❖ Mobile architectures that unfold infinitespaces within them.

❖ The labyrinth would symbolize the transformative process of artistic experience where man constantly is faced with emptiness, but also with creation. Conceptions of infinite universes in the inner lightness of the cubes that the sculptor extends through the formal simplicity on the horizon. The same symbol that can serve to evoke invisiblerealities.
